Being prepared

Walpole firefighter Samuel Snyder (left), with Corporal Danny Santiago from the 1st Civil Support Team, examines a radiological testing device last week at the East Walpole fire station. Firefighters recently received training from the Army and Air National Guard on the operation of survey meters and dosimeters that can be used to detect radiation in the event of a terrorist attack. This is the first time in recent memory that firefighters were trained on the operation of the devices. The training was provided at no cost to the department.
